Wave International grows its international sales and marketing with the appointment of Bryan Stewart

Wave International has announced the appointment of Bryan Stewart to head up the company's international and UK marine sales and marketing activities.

Well known within the marine industry as the founder of International Market Development Ltd, Bryan has extensive experience working with high profile marine and environmental brands including The Seabin Project, Vaikobi, Gill, Typhoon, Sola and Body Glove. Using his years of expertise, Bryan supports companies with sales, marketing, and management services to develop international business opportunities.

Wave International founder and CEO Paul Gullett says "We're delighted to welcome Bryan on board to help develop and maximise international and home-based marine sales for Wave's range of products in the marine leisure and commercial, offshore, shipping and marina sectors. Bryan will be able to assist us with developing further the OEM market, support and grow our dealers and distributor within their own territories, and launch products and increase brand awareness in new markets."

Through working with The Seabin Project and other marine clients, Bryan brings extensive knowledge and passion for the protection of the marine environment. All Wave International's filter products and services are focused on ensuring no waste or pollution enters the water, and the company has recently enhanced its own sustainability credentials in its manufacturing, packaging and delivery processes.

Bryan says, "I am incredibly excited to be working with Paul and the Wave International team. This is a great brand that is a serious player in the global marine environmental market, and I am very much looking forward to helping to grow the international business."

When not working, Bryan enjoys sailing on a J70 racing yacht, skiing, cycling, and hiking.
